

2.2 Sample Food Maps

The following image is an example of a community food mapping pilot exercise carried out for Halifax. The image demonstrates one community mapping method, where a base map was printed and a community area pre-defined then participants mapped out the location of food resources in and around that community. Food maps can be a powerful method for both identifying the location of food resources, but also assessing the food awareness in that subgroup.

Example Community Food Map (From Food Toolkit Workshop)